Cooper-Church Defeated in Test Ballot in House

By Richard L. Lyone

WASHINGTON, July 9 (WP) .- The House, in a wildly confused session, rejected without debate today the Cooper-Church amendment to curb U.S. military actions in Cambodia, which the Senate adopted after seven weeks of debate. The vote was 237 to 153.

Anti-war members charged that they were unfairly denied a chance to debate the issue on its first appearance in the House. Democratic leaders said they would have been given time to talk but didn't ask

After lengthy conferences during the roll call, Mr. Morgan asked for unanimous consent that debate be permitted, despite the vote just taken to cut it off. Several Republicans objected.

The peace forces then moved to instruct the House conferees to accept the Cooper-Church amendment in conference. Rep. Wayne Hays, D., Ohio, immediately moved to kill the proposal by tabling it, and his motion was not debatable. After more floor discussions, Mr. Hays also asked unanimous consent to permit debate, but objections were shouted from all sides.

Mr. Hays's tabling motion was approved, 237 to 153, and that was the end of it. If the vote on his motion is considered a yes or no vote on Cooper-Church, the House doves piled up their biggest vote ever against the war. Their previ-ous high was 146, which also came (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5) embattled Suez Canal zone adds urgency to Secretary of State Rogers's proposal for a limited cease-fire to facilitate negotiations for an Arab-Israeli peace settlement.

Although there are some eucouraging signa of movement by the United States and the Soviet Union toward a common negotiating position, there is growing danger that the big two may be dragged into a confrontation in the Middle East before they are able to push their respective clients to the peace table. Priority, therefore, must be given to defusing the short-fused time bomb on the Suez Canal.

Israel accuees the Soviets and the Egyptians of attempting to upset the power balance by extending the new SAM-3 miselles and improved SAM-2s, with Soviet technicians, into the Suez Canal area, This would threaten the aerial euperiority that tha Israelis insist—with reason—they must maintain over a 20-mile zone on the west hank in order to protect their thinly held positions on the east bank. President Nasser's threat to build "a complete antlaircraft defense system" along the canal and the recent unprecedented destruction of three Israell planes within one week over the Suez adds weight to Jerusalem's fears. President Nixon's tough statement of a few days ago

A creeping escalation by both sides in the indicates that Israel's concern is shared in Washington.

But other United States officials do not eubscribe wholly to this thesis. While conceding that Soviet missiles have been inching toward the canal, they say that no SAM-3s have been installed within 20 miles of the canal and that the relatively few SAM-2 emplacements within that range bave been there for some time.

It is also worth noting that the first successful missile actions against Israeli jet warplanes occurred after a month of unusually heavy Israeli aerial bombardment of Egyptian positions along the canal and that the downings reportedly occurred at a site 30 miles inland from the canal. This suggests that while the Russians have been inching eastward, the Ieraelis may have begun to penetrate westward, heyond the 22-mile limit they set after the introduction of Soviet pilots flying in defense of inner Egypt.

Whoever is responsible for the latest escaiation, it is clear that there is enough provocation and suspicion on both sides to precipitate a wider battle involving at least one of the great powers and prohably both of them if President Nixon's stern warning is to be taken at face value. To avert this imminent danger, a cease-fire along the Suez has become an urgent necessity.

...And Elements of a Truce

for the explosive Suez front must encompass a number of essential elements.

One of these elements is a clear commitment from Israel to withdraw from the bulk of occupied territories in the context of an overall peace agreement. So long as the Arabs believe they have no chance to regain lands lost in the 1967 conflict through diplomacy, they are unlikely to renounce the military alternative no matter how costly or futile that altarnative may he. If the United States is to stand behind Israel in this hour of trial, Washington has a right to expect Jerusaiem to be more forthcoming than the Meir government has been so far in supporting the United States' effort to promote u diplomatic solution.

On the other side, the Israelis must have stronger indications that the Arahs and the

To be effective, any cease-fire agreement Russians are at last prepared to move toward real peace. In this respect, Arab rhetoric and Soviet-Arab military moves bave certainly not been reassuring.

> There must also be firm guaranteesprobably through a strong United Nations presence-that a cease-fire will not be used to undermine the advantages Israel enjoys from her present forward position; that is, the Egyptians must not be permitted to utilize a truce to hulld an offensive capability on the west bank of the canal and there must be no move to reopen the canal prior to agreement on an overall settlement.

The imposition of a cease-fire under such conditions of reciprocal assurances and safeguards is a matter of the highest urgency for the United Nations and especially for the big powers.

Brandt's Ostpolitik

Herr Willy Brandt has got bogged down at home and abroad in a manner reminiscent of Mr. Wilson in his days of travail.

The trouble has been that, instead of concentrating on home affairs, as promised be has neglected them and gone all out after a quick and resounding success in his new Ostpolitik. The results have been meager in the extreme, thanks to a brilliant stonewalling partnership between the Kremlin and Herr Ulbricht.

Instead of admitting this, Herr Brandt, often bypassing his Free Democrat coalition partner, Herr Scheel, gave encouraging but obscure reports of progress being made by his old Socialist party crony, Herr Bahr, in marathon secret negotiations with Mr. Gromyko in Moscow.

The mounting alarm in public opinion was reflected in last month's provincial elections. Herr Brandt began putting the brake on. The date for Herr Scheel'e much-postponed visit to Moscow for formal negotiations was still not forthcoming yesterday. Instead, Herr Brandt, yielding late in the day to mounting clamor for action on the home front, announced a stiff anti-inflationary program.

Education and crime are also to receive overdue attention. Concentration on such aubjects is much mora to the point, and much more likely to be rewarding, than overoptimistic efforts to remove Russia's real or supposed grievances.

-From the Daily Telegraph (London).

Russia, Israel and the Arabs

The UN Secretary-General, U Thant, gave on Tuesday in Geneva the most encouraging assessment yet of Soviet proposals for a settlement to the Middle East conflict.

Has not the time come for the Soviet Union to be a peace-promoter as well as the military backer of the Arabs? The Soviet Union must fear becoming irrevocably committed to fighting actively on the Arab sida and running the risk of the "collision of the superpowers" President Nixon talked about on July 1.

The Soviet Union used the creation of Israel in the first place as the chink through which to introduce its influence into the Middle East. Its existence is still of service. as a lever for pro-Soviet Arab feelings. In any case, all the Arah states around Israel -with the exception of Syria and Palestinian guerrilla groups-hava implicitly accepted Israel's continued existence through UN Security Council Resolution 242 of November, 1967.

The political support and economic links of the Soviet Union in the area would certainly survive a settlement . . .

An open Suez Canal would link Arab eupport in the Mediterranean and South Arabia and enable the Soviet fleet to move swiftly into the Indian Ocean and toward the Far East.

It is regrettable that U Thant felt, after telephone conversations with Jarring in Moscow, that there was not yet a basis for the reactivation of his mission. Perhaps the Soviet proposals can give it a new lease of

porting the Nixon plan. Only 1 of 7

The major problem in clearing the bill from committee in time for final congressional action this year is one Moynihan did not mention in his speech. As other ad-ministration officials embarraseingly concede, only one of the seven Republicans on the commit-tee-Wallace Bennett of Utah-is even a lukewarm advocate of the President's proposal, and several Republicans are dead set against it.

That is the real problem for the bill. In the House, Rep. John Byrnes of Wisonsin, ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, secured an almost solid lineup of committee Republicans to keep the pressure on chairman Wilhur Mills and the Democrats to report out the bill. That pressure wholly lacking in the Senate.

For reasons that are not at all clear, administration lebbyists falled to auticipate the Senate problem. Indeed, they assumed as Moynihan said—"that if the hill could get by the House it could readily be enacted." It is this tactio—the coolness of conservative Republicans on the Finance Committee and the misjudgment of administration lobbyists that most observers see at the root of the welfare bill's dif-ficulties. In attributing the impasse, instead, to the liberals' "dance of death." Moynihan may actually have made the situation seem more hopeless than it is.

There is reason to think that action will soon be forthcoming. About the time he spoke, word was sent to the President through Bob Finch that Mr. Nixon must intervene personally with the Republicans on the committee and make support of welfare reform an issue of party loyalty with them.

If he does so, there is at least an even chance the bill will be rethe Senate in time to become law Democrats are already taking to parade; 2. Ending "discrimination" against Ulster Catholics. July 12 commemorates the Battle of the Boyne when Protestant King William of Orange defeated a Catholic army. The fervently Protestant Orange Order customarily celebrates with parades. Since the 12th falls ou Sunday, sternly observed in much of the north, the ceremonies have been postponed until Monday. The idea of an Irish parade touching off explosions seems re-mote to Americans familiar with the jovial St. Patrick'e Day processense reviving the old effort to do sions. However, Irish Catholics reright enemy and interpret its acts

They claim that stalwart Orange men in blazing chest sashes and hard derby hats, beating drums with sticks attached to their wrists by thongs, so frensiedly that blood runs down, deliberately seek to inspire fear. Demonstrations thunder before Catholic homes, churches, clubs and taverns.

Unvielding Orangemen

In the electric atmosphere existing after recent killings in Ulster, Dublin has requested London to reroute some parades and cancel those slated to march in predomi-Bann River - Pomeroy, Maghera free. and Dungiven.

In view of existing tension this seems reasonable but the Orange Order bas refused to call off any parades although one can scarcely say it has suffered discrimination. It marches in various places some 1.400 times a year. The buck has now passed to London which doesn't like to exercise ultimate authority over the Stormont's theoretical in-

The discrimination problem is more difficult. Ulster Catholics have fewer civil rights than Protestants with regard to housing, jobs and the franchise in municipal votes. It is ridiculous that London, which holds final power, has not long ago insisted that full democracy be applied in Ulster as elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

The Uister Protestant majority resents Catholic hopes to unify all Ireland and fears it might someday become a minority. Moreover, aware of the higher Catholic birthrate, it wants to ensure its own privileged status. This results in a hulltin confrontation and recurrent tension, often spattered with blood. All Irich, whether they favor green or crange, enjoy a fight.

No Partiality

Douglas-Home assured Billery there would be no partiality in enforcing law and order in Ulster but the Irish have been aroused by reports that the British Army, sent north last year to protect Cetholics, has recently builted them. Dublin's TV, talking about the "unnatural state" preserved by British arms and the "cruel line" of British military authorities, has scarcely cooled things. In both sections of partitioned

Ireland extremists are gaining at the expense of reason. Hillery himself contributed to this trend by a flamboyant secret trip to Belfast. The situation aches for balm but even the UN seems crippled. Dublin sought help there last year; however London's diplomacy kept the subject from the agenda.

It is possible, unless wise precautions are taken over this weekend, that ecrious trouble may suddenly erupt. An old Irish proverb says You are easily led where you wouldn't mind having another bash.

The U.S. and Japan

By Henry Owen

WASHINGTON.—The collapse of U.S. Japanese trade uegotiations is a reminder that the central long-term issue in Asia is the U.S.-Japanese relationship. Japan is where the power in Asia is; if present trends continue and Amerlcan relations with Japan go sour. the resulting damage could overshadow anything that happens in Southeast Asia.

The immediate issue is textiles. President Nixon promised Southern textile firms and labor unions in the campaign of 1968 that be would protect them against cheap Japanese imports. But the textile industry and unions are also powerful in Japan, where the issue hae become a focus for reviving nationalism and latent anti-Amerteanism.

The United States and Japan have not been able to agree ou the terms of a voluntary limit on Japanese exports. This acts the stage for congressional action on proposals for a mandatory limit on U.S. imports—which could trigger a chain of retaliation whose end is hard to foresee.

Political Issues

In the end, the textile question will probably be compromised; the two sides will learn to live with each other. But some damage will have been done along the way, and a vivid illustration given of the greater damage that iles ahead if the U.S. and Japanese governments are not able to take account of each other's domestic political problems in addressing issues which concern them both.

The skillful way in which the Okinawa question was handled shows that the problem can be solved if both sides work at it. The trick will be to repeat that success in dealing with two upcoming key issues: the U.S. security role in Asia and Japan's nuclear status. On each of these issues, attitudes are changing on one side of the Pacific but there is great insensitivity to that change on the other. This could end badly.

Pirst, as to the U.S. security role: In the past, the United States fixed that role on the basis of what it took to be its own interests in Asia. If the Japanese felt that their interests were also being advanced, they applauded; if not they were critical privately and sileut publicly. American governments enjoyed the luxury of deciding what to do without having to defend U.S. actions to their own public.

But now the United States is moving toward a lower profile and coming increasingly to see its interests in Asia as centering on the main aggregation of power in that area-Japan. Future U.S. governments will probably be reluctant to undertake Asian military actions or commitments which do not relate clearly to that interest.

This means that they will wi to consult closely with the Jap nese, and prefer to act only wh explicit U.S.-Japanese agreeme can be secured. They will not e pect Japan to join in military a tion, but they will want and expo public Japanese political suppo-But most Japanese are still li claims that despite rising costs the queen hasn't had an increase from the government since 1952. The queen gets £475,000 ($1.14 million) a year to pay for the monarchy. Out of this she has to pay her 300 fulltime staff, from the Lord Chamberlain to the housemaids. The queen's husband, Prince Philip, put the royal finances in the news last November when he told a surprised interviewer on American television, "We go into the red next year."

Harold Wilson, former Labor party prime minister, responded with a promise that a special committee would be appointed

But the new Conservative party government of Edward Heath has still to declare its attitude toward the Wilson undertaking. Mr. Heath and his cabinet are likely to be sensitive to the criticism that a royal pay rise would cause after Conservative party election promises to curb inflation and control prices and incomes in the public sector.

A Story from the South

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS, July 9. - Nothing seems to have improved socially since 1865 in Tennessee. Racism may wear a mask publicly, but it operates behind the scenes as ruthlessly as it did in the days of slavery. Such is the depressing message that "The Liberation of L. B. Jones," which has just opened at the Paris (in English), delivers. It will shock Europeans as it has shocked civilized Americans.

Its director, William Wyler, as competent movie maker as American cinema possesses. has received countless letters of protest. The majority of these argue that there are millions of white Southerners who abhor the Klu Klux Klan, favor equal rights for blacks and are making an heroic effort to alter injustice.
"I have replied," said Mr. Wyler, visiting Paris last week. "that there are undoubtedly such people, but my film is not

His film, based on a novel by Jesse Hill Ford, is about a black undertaker in a Tennessee town who seeks a divorce from his wife, charging her with adultery. Her lover is a white policeman. If she does not contest the divorce, her co-respondent will not be named in court. But she is greedy for a financial settlement from her husband and engages a lawyer to defend her. To prevent a scandal and the policeman's losing his job, the undertaker is lynched by and, in the main, convincing in its execution. He has handled the central plot flawlessly. If in the secondary story of a black native who returns to murder a policeman who has abused him in his boyhood the action turns melodramatic, one allows that melodrama is never far from reality in such a setting.

The events leading up to the slaying of the undertaker are seen through the eyes of a local lawyer's nephew who has come home from the North with his young wife. It is the nephew who urges his uncle to take on the undertaker's divorce case.

Mr. Wyler has provided a graphic picture of a Southern town, contrasting the stately mansions with the black quarter of shabby frame houses down by the railroad tracks. The temper and the mores of the people, both black and white, are shrewdly delineated and the dialogue has the ring of the lifelike talk of such 8 community. It is not completely one-sided in its naras the real engine of destruction is the faithless black wife. Are the portraits of the white villains exaggerated? Yes and no. It would be absurd to deny the existence of such men, but perhaps they are not as representative as the film tends to suggest.

The consummate direction is matched by superb interpretation. Roscoe Lee Browne is a remarkable actor and his characterization of the persecuted undertaker is done-to employ the E.M. Forster phrase-

Wave of 'Inside' Books on Nixon

By Haynes Johnson

Washington (WP).—Billy Graham delivering prayers in the White House, Julie Nixon leading tours, children writing their President, the President delivering his state addresses and dealing with his crises— these are all part of the latest chapter in an ancient story set along the Potomac.

The writers, with an assist from the White House, are again at work in Washington.

Already, the first wave of "inside" books on Richard Nixon's Washington is beginning to crest. The White House has been working with several authors who are developing books on the Nixon administration and

Not surprisingly, that group includes few, if any, authors whose past work has been sharply critical of the President. One of these is Victor Lasky, who has moved to Washington from New York. He is now at work full-time on an appraisal of the Nixon presidency. Mr. Lasky is the anti-c- of two caustic books about . F. and Robert F. Kennedy ("JFK: The Man and the Myth," and "Robert F. Kennedy: the Myth and the Man.")

Not Official

"I understand there are not to be plans for an 'official' book on the administration," says. Walter J. Minton, president of G.P. Putnam's Sons, the New York publishing house that has commissioned the Lasky book on Nixon. "I was told by a friend Lasky would be about as close as you get."

The White House makes the point that it is not attempting to direct—or rewrite history. Its role, according to communications director Herbert G. Klein, is to try and help the writers by talking with them and making people available for interviews.

The group on the current White House book list could hardly be considered hostile. By their scope and focus, most of the projected works promise to he favorable, if not flattering. Nor will the timing upset the political thinking inside the White House. Lasky's book, Putnam's says, will be ready in time

Others that the White House knows about will be ready long before then.

Two of these are being pub-lished by Funk & Wagnalls, a firm that has close Nixon ties from the past. Funk & Wag-nalls is owned by Reader's Digest Books, Inc., a division of the Reader's Digest Association. The Reader's Digest, a publication with a conservative reputation, commissioned articles by Richard Nixon in that long period when he was out of public office during the 1960s.

Nixon's Speeches

The Funk & Wagnalis works include a collection of Nixon's speeches and major policy statements. It is being edited by Richard Wilson, of Cowless Publications. The working title is "Setting the Course: The First Year." Publication is planned for September. A more ambi-tious project for that firm is being undertaken by Jeffrey Hart. Hart, a Dartmouth professor who is senior editor of the National Review and on the board of directors of the American Conservative Union, is planning a book on the Nixon years leading up to his election as President.

Among other books in which the White House has been involved are a volume by Art Linkletter, tentatively entitled. "Children's Letters to the President," a collection of sermons delivered at White House prayer sessions; and a text and picture book on the Nixon White House by Allen Drury and photographer Fred J. Marton. Con-tractual negotiations for that last book are now under way with Doubleday.

Doubleday, which Mr. Nixon's own "Six Crises" as well as Dwight D. Eisenhower's books, also has signed up Kevin P. Phillips, the author of "The Emerging Republican Majori-ty," for future political books.

Other Books

Others now working on books about Mr. Nixon's presidency have no such prior ties. One of these is Robert Semple, White House correspondent of The New York Times. He has signed a contract with Harper & Row to do a Nixon book. Already on the stands are two more critical appraisals of Mr. Nixon, These are John Osborne's 'The Nixon Watch" and Jules Witcover's "The Resurrection of Richard Nixon.

O'Hara's Scorn for Critics Lives on at Memorial Exhibit

By Alden Whitman

NEW YORK, JULY 9 (NYT).-John O'Hara's cantankerous scorn for his critics lives again in a memorial exhibit of the writer's work that opened Tuesday at the University Libraries of Pennsylvania State University at University Park. "There are things that I am for and things I am against, and they have not changed much in 30 years nor are they likely to," the novelist and shortstory writer remarked in the manuscript of his 1964 acceptance speech of the Merit Medal for the Novel of the American Academy of Arts and Letters. Then he went on to say: "The fully rounded frony is that I can expect the same degree of abuse for my 1964 conservatism that I got from my critics for my lack of restreint in 1934 (the year he published his first novel, 'Appointment in Samarra")."

New Gauge Puts U.S. Jobless Rate At Two-Year High in 2d Quarter

WASHINGTON, July 9 (NYI).—The second quarter of this year actually showed the first really significant rise in unemployment during the current economic slowdown, according to a new measure of unemployment developed outside the government

The second quarter's jobless rate by this measure was percent a two-year high-up sharply from 4 percent in the first quarter and a quarterly average of 4 percent during 1969. Government figures set a 5 percent rate in May and called it a five-year high. In June, tha "rate" slipped to 4.7 percent, but the number of people jobless rose by a third. The new method seeks to measure "hidden unemployment" by calculating a "true" and "smooth" labor force that includes women and teenagers who move in and out of the officially reported labor force according to the availability of jobs. It was developed mainly by Alfred J. Telia, an economist now doing research at Georgetown University and formerly with the Federal Reserve Board. His imemployment series has attracted some favorable attention within the govern-ment, although the Bureau of Labor Statistics is far from ready to accept it as better than the reported unemployment

Accelerating Grown in 1939.

* Tumover up 40% * Net Earnings up 34%

The AGM of the Bayeri-ache Motoren Werke AG was held in Munich on July 10, 1970.

Review and Prospects

1969 was a year of accelerating growth for BMW. Turnover rose by 40% to DM 1.443.4 million, and net earnings by 34% to DM 45.7 million.
148.000 vehicles were produced in the year, during which daily production rose from 577 to 672 units.

Our sht-cylinder series, introduced in 1968, was expanded to include the BMW 2800. This model combines the characteristic BMW sports car performance with the luxury of a large limousine. Further technical improvements were made to other sainting models, to which no basic changes are planned for the mmediate future. Our new twin-cylinder motor cycle series R50/5, R60/5 and R75/5 was successfully launched at home and abroad and production started at our Burlin factory in the Autumn of 1969.

The unprecedented soom led to rising costs in all sectors of industry. Towards the end of the year we were forced, in common with other manufacturers, to raise our home prices. The DM revaluation, however, made it impossible for us to increase export prices correspondingly.

We expect further sonsfactory development of business in 1970, based on our successful range of two and four door medium sized cors, our six-cylinder models and the new motor cycles.

To meet the expected growth in demand we plan to continue improving our daily production figures. We have also acquired large sites for new production facilities at Dingolfing and Landshuf as our Munich factory improve the quality of our products still further and to counteract rising prices. Motor cycle production was fully concentrated in the Berlin factory during is approaching the limit of its capacity. In order to provide funds for future developments the management is recommending to this year's Annual General Meeting steps to increase the company's capital by DM 200 million

Group sales increased by 17.7% to 144.788 units. Home deliveries accounted for 78.939 units (68.709 in 1968) and deliveries abroad reached 65.849 (54.262 in 1968). Our most important export markets continue to be the EEC and EFIA countries and the USA.

At home and abroad our sales and service network was strengthened and the standard of . our after-sales service set even higher. At the end of 1969 the sales organisation at home consisted of 1,084 dealers and workshops, more than half of them representing BMW exclusively. Abroad the number of importers and dealers rose from 2.674 in the previous year to 2.834. During 1969 about 5.000 members of our sales and service organisation attended courses on business and technical subjects.

Turnover

The following table shows the growth of turn-over since 1963 and the distribution of home and export sales:

Sporting Successes

BMW enjoyed another very successful racing season. Altogether our cars scored 129 outright wins 213 category wins 1.531 dass wins 1.318 second places 1.180 third places and won a whole series of championships, including

The European Cup for
Touring Cars 1969 The European Hill-Climb Championship (Touring Car Closs) 1969 Second prize in the German Rally Championship 1969,

Because of the change in the tax system the figures from 1968 on are given without turnover tox. The growth in turnover is much higher than that af unit sales, the reason being the introduction in 1969 of the much higher priced six-cylinder

Tomover per employee rose 14.1% in 1969 to DM 73.600.

Our motor cycles, too, continued the tradition of success linked with the name BMW.

Supplies

As always our suppliers gave us excellent and reliable service and their cooperation at times of heavy demand was much appreciated.

Research and Development

In order to keep pace with the increased volume of business the facilities of the development division were improved during 1969 and its staff enlarged. Special attention has been paid to strengthen ing mass production inspection procedures.

The wide range of safety regulations and their varying provisions in different countries call to continual testing of current models as well as of types still under development. Regulations above all in the USA, aimed at limiting nitric axide in exhaust fumes have been token into account in our development of petrol injection engines. Our research efforts have also been directed towards improving the internal and external safety of our vehicles and their performance under all conditions, and to further development of our

proven high-performonce engines. Our racing experience is especially useful in this work.

* Production up 26.5%

* Export Turnover up 42%

Personnel

Expansion of production at our Munich and Dingolfing factories, and the new series of motor cycles being produced in Berlin have led to a further increase in our staff, who now number 21.316.

Investment and Depreciation

Our investments in fixed assets reached o new record of DM 206.8 million and these expenditures will continue to grow during 1970. The outstanding investment project is the new spare parts supply centre in Dingolfing.

Depreciation of fixed assets amounted to DM 76.7 million, Additions to buildings and movable assets have been written off to the maximum extent permitted by tax legislation, In addition we have taken full advantage of all special fiscal concessions.

The table shows investment and depreciation including special tools (in DM m).

Finance

The expansion in volume of business is also shown in the rise of the balance sheet total by DM 223.9 million to DM 794.3 million. This increase is spread between fixed assets (127.2 million) and current assets (DM 96.7 million).

Investments amounting to DM 206.9 million were financed by depreciation, declared reserves and long-term borrowed funds. We financed the increase in current assets—mainly stocks and accounts receivableby raising the reserves, suppliers and accounts payable. We used our short-term credit facilities anly to a relatively minor degree.

Associated Companies

Our continuing efforts to better the service we provide aur customers led in 1969 to the foundation of BMW Autovermietung GmbH Rent-A-Car. The share capital is DM 0.15 million, of which BMW AG holds half.

As it was, his partner drove the hidding to slam. His twono-trump response conventionally asked his partner to show his short suit. Once South had located the diamond shortage he did not need the formality of Blackwood; the chance that two aces were missing was almost zero.

West led the diamond ace, and South found himself facing a harder task than he had anticipated. West shifted to the heart jack, feeling that this was less likely to help the declarer than the other possible plays. South won with the king, and faced the guessing situation in trumps.

There was one very small straw in the wind: If East had held several spades including the queen he might have encouraged in diamonds, hoping that West would be in a position to force dummy to ruff and weaken the declarer's trump holding.

With this in mind, South

He was then able to ruff a diamond, cash the spade ace, and return to the closed hand with a club lead to draw the missing, trump. So the slam

South would have gone down against a singleton queen in the East hand, but his play guard-ed against a small singleton, which was much more likely. The normal play of the spade king before finessing would have falled, because South could not then have finessed twice in spades and also ruffed a dia-

DAYS OF LIFE AND DEATH AND ESCAPE TO THE MOON

By William Saroyan. Dial. 139 pp. $5.95 Reviewed by Edward Hoagland

WILLIAM SAROYAN turned 60 on the first of September. 1967. "Days of Life and Death and Escape to the Moon" is his diary of the month before his birthday, which he spent in Paris, and of two autumn months the following year, back home in Fresno. It's about getting old, not about escaping to the moon. He reads the obituaries daily. Steinbeck dies; the last Krupp dies; Paul Muni dies; Upton Sinclair, Tallulah Bankhead and Thomas Merton die. He remembers the death of a cormorant which crept out of the sea and into a hole in a cliff, facing away from the sea and the sun, to die.

"I have now lived long enough to have noticed the arrival and departure of everybody. They came forward shining, and went away faded or invisible. That's the thing about staying alive-you see that. As for myself, the whole thing is a joke. I look like an old man. One would think I had gone to a lot of trouble about getting ready to play an unsuitable part in an absurd Sunday School morality play... The trouble is I used to be a young man and I haven't for-Not many men do forget, but most of his life Saroyan has written specifically about being young. If sometimes he has seemed unconvinced by his own exultation, that is the sort of tailure all writers know. He has been a rhapsodist and, with dignity, has outlived the time that produced other rhapsodists -Thomas Wolfe, Sherwood Anderson and Steinbeck. Inevitably, there are some false notes in this brief book, when he tries to blow the old jubilant strains and they don't sound the same; but not nearly as many as would be the case with a writer who really had been a Johnny-onenote all these years. He's no fool, and mostly he goes for long bus rides and walks, buys sec-ondhand books, fights with his son, complains of the pain of his ulcer, of his bouts with insomnia and troublesome teeth. and takes pictures of himself to railroad-station booths—perhaps a more emphatic record of how he's progressing than just glancing into a mirror would be. He reads the In Memoriam column of the (London) Times dubiously. At a big party in New York during his high-flying years he had met George Gershwin, whose "Rhapsody in Blue" he had played on his wind up phonograph every morning while he was 16, doing calisthenics and getting dressed to go to work (delivering telegrams, as everyone knows). Gershwin, still comparatively young in 1935, spoke sadly of the his powers, and this is what Saroyan is feeling, too. On the other hand, he remembers that Bach, Verdi and Bernard Shaw worked well when they were old. He tries to go slow and easy now, "not feeling obliged to be a kind of a hero of the world," gives up coffee and cigarettes, changes even his work habits. trying to accept the fading of himself in himself and of his name in the world. Thinking of Joyce, he remembers walking in Dublin and Trieste—he keeps all the old pairs of shoes that he's ever worn. He remembers his grandmother Lucy; remembers the origins of Fresno, once simp spring called Green Bush St where cattle quenched thirst. Once he lived in a h on the beach at Malibu w seals slept underneath his porch. He thinks of the m he made ("surely more tha million), and buys some tur boils the greens, eats ti "whoops to heaven," think the letters of admiration received from young artists so many years—letters really were writing to the selves, crammed so full of hopes and intentions that o he sent the letters back, wi note saying they might : such a fine outline of the b that they had in mind. Wa ing his gardener at work considers how little of his potential he has actually t He goes out to find a big of rative boulder to put in yard, wrestles all 60 pound it up the bank of a dry r bed, and discovers not only the work does not exhiba him anymore and he gets refreshment from the con air, but that he has practic killed himself. Like Wolfe and Steinb Saroyan was a writer whom ple of college age ten or 20 yr ago stumbled on before i were out of their teens, reas big chunks in a flash and re about to their friends, ma imitating him in gay beginn to their own short stories plays. Then, classing him somebody who was "an favorite," who did a certain things very well and who me ed an euthusiastic stage themselves, they moved on larger figures. "seminal" Dreiser, "mainstream" like F gerald, "major" like Fault or to some contemporary Saroyan's like Nathanael W off in a side corner, who see ed to have been ahead of time. Since Sarovan himself a sentimentalist, why not sentimental about him? E the Beats, who were rhapsodi mystics, celebrators of spon neity, didn't take him par ularly seriously. Like many tremists, he was easier to miss than to forget. Now the's not so determinedly you he has become a memora man of the center as well brother at once to Thon Mann and to the author "Krapp's Last Tape."

"Out of coffee, cigarettes, a all the rest of it comes first disjointedness, forgetfulne coughing, pains of various kir in the human plumbing, sha fiery stabs about the heart up and down the legs and are loss of connection, loss of dir tion, and an almost unshakea distaste for everything. What can man do to move along in so kind of grace through his da and years? Well, there are million ways of putting it, b it always comes down to pret much the one way—he can his best, in accordance with h laws and in keeping with he truth in favor of himself ar on behalf of his expectation, see it all through in grand sty with some meaning, and wither harm to anybody else."

Edward Hoagland's most recent book is "Notes From to Century Before." He wrote the review for Book World, literar supplement of the Washingto

Not an American was in the first half dozen yesterday. The most famous course in the world was demolished yesterday as 24 men finished under 70 in easy conditions. But then the storm broke, play was postponed and resumed in torrential downpour at 7:30 a.m. today...

Trevino was furious. They wouldn't do this in Bombay or Calcutta. I'm not concerned about myself. I just shot a 68 but they've given us the Royal and Ancient shart," he said.

Most of the players were unhappy about the carry over, feeling that the round should have been canceled, not postponed by the Roya) and Ancient committee. "Thunder and lightning flashing all the time," said ex-army sergeant Orville Moody. "You could have been killed out there."

Trevino was repentant later buoyed up by his superb play. The Mexican was four under par after 12 and matched par the rest of the way for his morning 68, maneuvering the small ball low in the wind. #### Lee Is Leader In Points, Money

NEW YORK, July 9 (UPI). -Lee Trevino leads in money winnings and points standings on the Professional Golfers Association (PGA) tournament players division circuit for the 15th consecutive week, the FGA announced.

Trevino's 1,115.6 points give him a considerable lead over second-place Bob Limn (984.4) and his $118,785 in prize money is $11,000 more than that of runner-up Dick Lotz ($107,662). Frank Beard, Homero Blancas and Bob Charles rank 3-4-5 in points while Gary Player ($89,053), Dave Hill ($88,031) and Bruce Devlin ($87,499) follow Trevino and Lotz in earnings.

André François: One of the Romaniacs

PARIS.—This year's summer treat in Paris is the big exhibition of paintings, sculpture and graphics by André François, which will brighten the gray precincts of the Louvre's Musée des Arts Décoratifs until September. Although be had only six weeks to prepare the show and although the museum neglected to post his name outside until just the other day (their official sign painter had a toothache). Mr. François is shyly pleased to be in the Louvre.

"It's a good address." he points out. As a graphic artist Andre François has covered subjects from Wimbledon to Haiti from headache pills to color film and, in book jacket design, from Balzac's "Contes Drolatiques" to "Brave New World." Kafka, Faulkner and "Lord of the Flies.

His Christmas card of a fat fish with scales of many colors beamishly playing the violin was one of UNICEF's top sellers. He has wittily exposed the problems of knights encased in armor, the nusavory habits of crocodiles and has done a strange bestiary of creatures that are half human, half animal and do not seem to mind a bit. Being a humorist, he says. is like being a watchmaker; both depend on precision. He once made a bust of Queen Victoria and has done the sets and costumes for plays and ballets, "I like doing theater designs, though each time I say never sgain," he says. "The trouble is you live very closely with those people in a very limited world. Until opening night. Then they don't know you any more, you're lost."

Artists' Praise

He has been praised by fellow artists from Nicholas Bentley of England to Walt Kelly of Okefenokee swamp. It is generally agreed that Andre François is better known in England and the U.S. than in France.

"In France I had more difficulty. They'd say that's nice, but it's too Anglo-Saxon. In England fellow artists would say, you're lucky, you can sell your work here because you're typically French." Americans know him best for his ads.

magazine illustrations, children's books (a new one, "You Are Ridiculous," comes out this fall) and his New Yorker covers. "The New Yorker has a bank of covers. So have I. Sometimes they keep a cover for five years, which is confusing for an artist. You've forgotten it, and suddenly it becomes alive again. It makes you think twice about sending a cover—it can always be held as evidence against you.

Mary Blume

The Arts Décoratifs retrospective gives the public its first view of Andre Francois as a painter and sculptor, activities he has devoted himself to almost exclusively since 1960. The paintings, set mostly around his house outside Paris are lovely, pale, still and often disquieting. They complement and continue the graphics; all is harmonious. As Francois's triend and admirer Ronald Searle says, the consistency is remarkable.

That's the most satisfactory thing, to see things fall together," says André François. "The difference between a graphic artist and a painter is if you spend 80 percent of your time painting, you are a painter. If you spend 80 percent of your time on graphics, you are a graphic artist.

"You can't take off three months and paint-those periods you painfully save are unconnected. You can't be a psinter unless you spend most of your time painting. Painting isn't a hereditary disease, it's a question of time."

Andre François is a tall, attractive man married to an English wife and born, like two other leading humorists. Eugène Ionesco and Saul Steinberg, in Romania Ronald Searle calls the trio Romaniacs. He left Romania at the age of 16 1.2 and. pausing briefly at the Beaux Arts of Budapest on his way to Prance. came to Paris aged 17 to study with A.M. Cassandre who, he says, "more or less invented modern graphics."

He is a very funny man ("when I am serious people think I am joking"), prepared to go to the most elaborate lengths to avoid hurting people's or animal's feelings. His art has been called childish, and his eve is childishly clear and all-seeing. but the mind is sharp and sophisticated. He is often distracted and he played the White Knight in a film of "Alice m

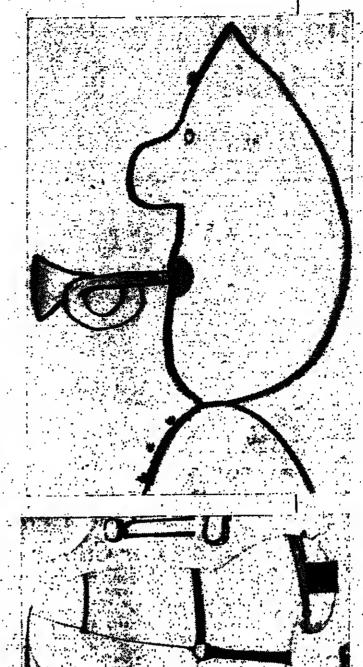

"François is on record as saving." Ronald Searle has said, "that he feelshis work is more a defense against what goes on in the world around him than an attack on it."

Post-Office Pens

Searle also refers to the time that Francois, searching for a nib to convey his characteristic rough line, swiped every post office pen over a wide area of Paris. François says he doesn't remember, but that it may be true. "The only thing I remember stealing is a huge box of sardines which kept me going for five days. I still like sardines, I don't like stealing them.

As a painter and graphic artist André François greatly admires Bonnard, but does not feel that anyone has been a major influence on him;

"Everyone is influenced for a while. When you're young you think if people you like are doing something, it is the only way to do it. Then you find out it's not the only way, it's not the way at all."

PEOPLE:

Jorge Corvix and Beatrix Paternina postponed their scheduled wedding at Cartagena, Colombia, after the groom set fire to the bride-to-be, while she was adoning her bridal gown. It all happened when Jorge couldn't get his cigarette lighter to work and refueled it from a bottle of gasoline. In the process he set fire to the nottle which he kicked to one side against Beatriz's gown. Miss Paternina, suffering from second-degree burns, will be able to make the trip to the
